HOYT JOSEPH HOYT FOR YEARS BY BACKLAILERS

YOUNG AND DAPPER

Le Baron is young and dapper. He wears pencil striped suits, $10 soft hats and custom made shoes. He is taller than two and a half feet in stature. He is a professional business man put up with $5,000.

Ball was furnished by Miss Theresa Stutzler, No. 92 Tremont street, South End. Le Baron was arrested three times here as a suspected person. His names were Joseph Allen, Lester Francis and Lester Fogel. Police say he has been at Boston and Brighton streets and is known as a "heavy" to several young women, one of whom about forty years old, whom he has driven in his about in a $10,000 limousine. Le Baron told Mrs. Emmens in his interviewing letter that he had written to doughboys, and had written $10,000, it is alleged. The enormous publication of news that Le Baron was an executive man, prominent director of former Yankee Division members to telephone Mrs. Emmens that they would find him, she said today. Mrs. Emmens, who is a cousin of Bishop Lawrence, said today that Le Baron would be able to follow the number of prominent society women who have been followed by the backlailers for the last three years.

COULD GIVE NAMES

"I could give you the names of women whose social prestige is among the highest in Boston, who have been the prey of this disruptive gang," said Mrs. Emmens. "There are women who have attempted to silence them, who have attempted to stay their malicious but for my part I am ready to go all the way through with a stand that will be slightly different from anything they have anticipated."

"I refused all the anonymous publicity that was bound to follow my action, and decided that the public who knows me was entitled to know the facts. For the sake of other women who have been hounded and for the sake of society at large, ever at the mercy of such intrigues, I shall provide the police with all the information necessary to putting this gang to rest."

HOUSED 3 YEARS

"Before going further, it should be made clear that this man Le Baron, who is known to the police by seven other names, and who has long criminal record, is not an ex-servant man, as one newspaper stated, nor was he ever connected with the service in any capacity. Le Baron's companies in the underworld are criminals. The pictures of one of them adorn the pages of the Daily and they are known to the police of Boston and New York."

"For three years these persons have attempted to secure money from me for the purpose of the letters alleged to have been written by me. I actually cannot say to whom the letters were supposed to have been written. I wrote to many service men during the war and it may even be such letters. As far as I am concerned, the letters are not important."

EXPOSES LE BARON

"This man Le Baron made an appointment to meet me at the Hotel Marlborough and to pay him $10,000. He informed this man that I was in view of the syndicate and that it was his intention to publish them unless I paid a sum of money. Le Baron asserted that any newspaper would pay a great deal of money for the privilege of using such letters."

"I informed this man that I was considerably in the public eye through my charitable work and that most of the newspaper editors and reporters knew me personally and would be slow to use anything derogatory to my character."

TRAPPED BY POLICE

"This man went so far as to express regret that any unfortunate publicity should attach itself to him. He said that the syndicate had rendered in various public enterprises. "You think so highly of the good I have done, isn't this?"

SEMAPHORE ARM AUTO SIGNAL CUTS DANGER

Water Baxter, Los Angeles

Under a canopy in front of its Commonwealth avenue showroom, the Lincoln Motor Company is showing the very latest five-passenger Red touring car. It is finished in the dull Canopy gray which has proved so popular during the past season. The other 1924 models of sedan, coupe, sedan and brougham are being exhibited today.

White it is never Red's policy to make big changes so radical that owners of the past season's cars are dissatisfied, these models do show modification in keeping with the progress. The touring car in particular is hung round the round, a point that will find much favor with everyone. This car is certain to establish a new standard of "dollar satisfaction" and the prices of the other models are quite in harmony with this standard.

These cars are equipped with fifteen brake drums and the hands have two and one-half inch faces. The steering is a new type, giving positive braking action over the entire circumference. A newly designed rear axle is an important part of the new Red, embodying the advantages of the full floating and the old semi-floating types. Other features, such as the new transmission box, are already exciting much favorable comment.

The cars now being exhibited are a part of the Lincoln Motor Company's thirty-first solid Red train load, which arrived this week.

Lawrence Spouse Bares Story of Triangle That Has Ruined Her Home

Lawrence, Sept. 22.—"It has been going on for nine months. I did all in my power to stop it. There was nothing left to do but to appeal to the courts."

This, said Mrs. Sarah Dunn, when interviewed at her home, No. 12 Providence street, is the reason she asked the courts to grant an injunction forbidding her husband, Charles H. Dunn, from seeing Miss Ouida De Lorne, beautiful phone girl, and alleged intimate friend of Dunn.

DUNN, BY HUSBAND.
The petition for the injunction, filed by Attorney Moses Marshall, is identical with that was by a man in Minnesota a month ago, and if granted, will establish a precedent in this state.

Dunn tells an entirely different story from his wife. "When the time comes," he said, "I'll be ready to present my case. I deny the accusations of my wife. The truth, when it comes out, will set me right in the eyes of my friends."

"I shall begin at the beginning," Mrs. Dunn told the Boston Herald. "Charles and Ouida met nine months ago. I introduced them. It was while Henry De Lorne Ouida's brother was running for State Representative, and Charles was interested in Mr. De Lorne's campaign."

INVITED GIRL TO HOME.
"I had met Ouida in a business way, and we had become friends. After I introduced her to Charles, there was a general feeling of friendship, and I frequently invited Ouida to the house. We had frequent telephone conversations, and we often went to the movies together."

"After many visits," said Mrs. Dunn, "I began to suspect the growing friendship between Charles and Ouida. Then, when I just couldn't stand it any longer, I had a talk with Ouida. I told her I thought she was becoming too chummy with Charles."

"Why, not," she told me, "there's nothing to it. We're just good friends. That's all."

OUIDA APOLOGIZED.
"If you feel that way about it," she told me, "I'm sorry. I make me feel terrible." And then she apologized and said there was nothing for me to worry about.

"But it didn't seem to make much difference," Mrs. Dunn continued. "The affair went on just the same. Charles often talked to her over the telephone before me. Charles began to seem a little more quiet and less intimate with Ouida."

"Ouida was one of the girls who remained at work. She was living at the Phillips Inn in Andover, together with other operators. I made all appointments with my husband, and he would tell me what he had seen and heard and understood, and I told her that by keeping company with my husband she was endangering my happiness."

PATIENCE AT END.
"I can't stand it much longer, I told her. I've got to do something. 'I wish you would start something. Charles and I are always going to be good friends,' Mrs. Dunn said. 'The next day Charles went to a place called, 'The Duke's Room' in Abington, and I'm sure Ouida went with him. When Charles came home he was drunk. I tried to get him to stop his pilfering and to start all over again."

"I won't leave Ouida. You may get a divorce if you like," was the only answer I got," Mrs. Dunn said. "I got in touch with Ouida's mother. She told me Ouida was a child, and that she was unable to change her mind, and that the best thing for me to do was to keep quiet and avoid publicity."

"Charles, Ouida and I met in the store where Charles works to talk the matter over. ADMITTS LOVE.

"You said, 'I'm here to tell the truth. Charles is the first man I've ever loved. I've known lots of young men, but none of them can compare with Charles. You must remember this thing had been going on for nine months, and it would be hard to break it off."

"If he were single I would go through hell fire for him." "That was as far as we got," said Mrs. Dunn.

"When I asked Charles if our son Marcus didn't mean anything to him, he answered that he had reached the place where he must sacrifice Marcus for Ouida. I told him, all right. I'll stick to Marcus and you can have Ouida."

Mrs. Dunn said she would take his husband back if he wanted the house he is still my husband," but that she had no hope of restoring the old intimacy and mutual confidence.

"She said her son Marcus, a lad of ten years, had telephoned Miss De Lorne, and pleaded with her with alone," and Miss De Lorne answered him in his own words, "I have my daddy. 'Tut-tut—you're too young to understand."

MADRID IN RACE FOR MEXICAN PRESIDENCY
Mexico, Ala., Sept. 22.—(Press.)—Napoles, brother of the late Francisco Madros, revolutionary president of Mexico, is the latest to announce his candidacy for the presidency of the republic. Madros, in his platform, declared against the present constitution, being antiquated and elementary system of government in Mexico to support the constitution now in force. The platform asserts that Madros will protect capital and at the same time construct favorably the labor laws to protect the laboring class of Mexico.

FOOD SURVEYS ORDERED BY COOLIDGE
By JOHN T. LAMBERT
Washington, Sept. 22.—(AP.)—President Coolidge has ordered a survey of the food products of the nation in the hope of making the country self-sustaining for emergencies while moving the serious problem of the suffering farmers of the great West.

This is the first time the agricultural situation has been looked on such an inclusive scale. It already has revealed such amazing conditions that the government may establish all its power to place agriculture on a firm foundation so as to save the farmers from financial ruin and put the country in a position to "stand off the world if necessary."

Conditions revealed include:
1.—The foreign market for American foodstuffs has collapsed.
2.—Exports of grains and grain products have fallen off $15,000,000 in the first eight months of this year.
3.—Foreign nations took only 44,750,000 bushels of our wheat since January as compared with 100,000,000 bushels in the same period last year.
4.—American farmers nevertheless produced corn, wheat and other grains until they overstocked the world, failing to realize that Russia and the continental nations were gradually getting on their feet, able to raise much of their required foodstuffs.

5.—That the country is importing about $100,000,000 a year of rubber, sugar, wool, coffee and foodstuffs, a great deal of which could be grown on the very farms that are now overstocked with unsalable grains.

They include products which would be vital to the security of the nation if she were surprised by war. President Coolidge has practically decided to invite the dirt farmers to send representatives to the White House from the corn and wheat belts.

FARMERS WANT ACTION
He has talked with senators, congressmen and the theoretical experts of the government. There has been a great deal of ordered Jeremiah talking that conditions are so bad. The farmers want action. Magnus Johnson, Senator Henrik Shipstead and others in Washington is indicating the farmers want action.

President Coolidge's thought is to say to them: "You tell me what I can do to help you."

Germany Abandons Stamps; Can't Get 'Em on Envelope
Washington, Sept. 22.—(AP.)—Because it is now impossible to get enough German postage stamps on an envelope the German government has given up the use of stamps. Officials of the post office department were notified today that the cost of printing the stamps also is greater than their face value and that letters coming from Germany heretofore will bear only a cancellation indicating the necessary postage has been paid.

A letter from Germany now at the lowest unit of weight costs 20,000 marks to deliver in this country.

Some have said that the step might be a good idea for the post office.

SOUTH END COP SALVAGES 'CAP' AND HIS ROLL
Boston, Sept. 22.—(AP.)—Captain Herbert Goudin of Division 4 has a warm heart. He believes also in preventative work. He has instructed his men to that effect.

Early today Patrolman McCarthy saw a man and three women leaving a house in Warren street. He followed the man and saw him go to a rooming house on New York street. At the station house where McCarthy was taken it was learned that he had $1400. He said $200 had been stolen from him earlier in the evening in the North End.

He was kept at the station for a time, and then released with the $1400.

SUBWAY BUILDER FILES BANKRUPTCY
New York, Sept. 22.—(AP.)—William Bradley, former president of the Broadway Construction Company, subway contractor, which went into the hands of receivers October 14, 1918, today filed a voluntary petition in bankruptcy. Bradley has $24,000,000 in assets and $25,500,000 in liabilities. Most of the liabilities are for bonds on New York banks, which were part of the liabilities of the old company, the petition states.

GALLAGHER TALKS; MR. SHEAN WALKS

By NICHOLAS YOUNG

THE next number on the program, ladies and gentlemen, will be the entire National Anthem adopted by those who spend the brightly lighted hours of the night in theatres, on roof gardens and in sizzling cabarets. Introducing, if you please, Mr. Gallagher and Mr. Shean, who sing about themselves and get away with it in a fashion that has upset all the well known psychology of the popular song business. Fundamentally, music is one of the fine arts, but making a song popular is plain business and if, out of Fate's grab bag, you pluck a Gallagher and Shean you discover yourself mixed up in big business. It's a business that pays regular dividends, and pays them heavily. Ask Mr. Gallagher or Mr. Shean, who are now doing a personal appearance with their own product among Mr. Ziegfeld's famous group of "glorified American girls" at the Colonial.

POPULAR SONGS ARE BUSINESS NOT ART, SAYS MR. ED GALLAGHER

WHEN the real history of popular songs is written Mr. Ed Gallagher and Mr. Al Shean will have a chapter or two to themselves, and complaints in the story will be a recital of the unique fact that in order to remain with Ziegfeld and draw down a miserable $2,500 weekly stipend they were compelled to go before the solemn courts of New York and confess that they were not artists or even especially talented. In fact, they were witnesses who declared that Gallagher and Shean were pretty bad in a professional way and that any amateur could do about as well if given half a chance. By proving themselves a very common garden variety of performers they were permitted to remain with Mr. Ziegfeld and meet the paymaster every Saturday to the tune of $2,500. If they had been established in the dignified craft of artists of rare and unique ability, they would have been compelled to sing their songs for a rival producer for $750 a week. So, you see, it sometimes pays to be a little sub-normal in the matter of We've produced a new national anthem, says Mr. Gallagher.

MR. AL SHEAN IS IMPRESSIVELY SILENT WHEN PRESSED FOR NEWS

ED GALLAGHER—he's the tall one from San Francisco—is not as bashful and retiring as his testimony in the court proceedings indicate. "Why, our song is almost the national anthem," he declared the other night. "It's even more than that because its tune has spread all over the world and the words are sung in more languages, tongues and dialects than has been given to any song in this generation. We may not possess unusual talent, but we have the world coming to us with its offers. Just that so, Mr. Shean?" "It certainly is Mr. Gallagher," chuckled the dapper Mr. Shean, who is the acknowledged silent member of the firm.

YES, Mr. Shean is impressively silent in the presence of Mr. Gallagher. It may be by choice that he flutters in the background or it may be natural humility in the presence of one as willing and able to lift his voice in defense of a combination that has done so much to make bad music popular. But Shean's retiring nature is limited to the dressing room. On the stage he supplies the electric spark that lights up the act. It is the voice of Shean that you remember when leaving the theatre, but it is the voice of Gallagher that fills the dressing room. Contrasting natures can be depended upon to make safe traveling companions, and in Gallagher and Shean the team works in perfect harmony. Gallagher, the business man, makes the contracts and drives hard bargains in talking machine factories, with some publishers and with others who hope to trade in the Gallagher and Shean trade mark. He does the hard work and would be unhappy if he couldn't. He carries all the responsibilities and likes it. On the other side of the bargain you find Mr. Shean, happy and contented, without a care in the world beyond the weekly split in profits. Mr. Gallagher is such a good business man," he confided, as he excused himself and departed upon an expedition into an hour or two of soliloquy with midnight friends. Yes, indeed, things are very serene with Mr. Shean.

MR. GALLAGHER DOES THE REAL JOB AND MR. SHEAN DANCES

WITH SHEAN and his slender little walking stick well on their way into the galleries of upper Boylston street Mr. Gallagher had a clear field and a great desire to use it in conversation. "Whether we are artists or not," he began, "the public has taken us at a very high value. Possibly, or rather probably, there are many entertainers in vaudeville who would have done as well with our song, but we did dig it up—it was our idea—and if we hit upon a novelty we are naturally entitled to all the accruing benefits. The song was no sudden inspiration—it just happened. It came to us while we were groping about in the dark for material for a new act. You see, we had teamed together in vaudeville a good many years ago. Then we separated and for ten years followed separating paths. When it was decided to renew partnership we didn't have an act or a song that was worth anything, so we began to plan. One day I suggested to Shean that as we had been together before and were now reunited we might as well make a personal nonpareil musical using our own names. That was the beginning of the song and it was the beginning of our future. In view of the success that has followed Gallagher and Shean, our next step will be to work at the head of our own company. Our present contract with Mr. Ziegfeld has but few weeks to run and we may remain until the end of the season. I can promise our friends in Boston that on our next appearance here we will have our own company."

It was clear that Mr. Gallagher is ambitious. He was planning for the future and he proposed to make it a profitable one. "When we do plunge into the bigger things we hope to furnish another surprise—call it a novelty, if you wish. The 'Yes, We Have No Bananas' running a close second. 'And why not?' asked Mr. Gallagher. "It's not only a good number but it possesses a musical rhythm that has not been surpassed in modern composition. This is not my opinion alone but that of musicians who know what they talk about."

MR. SHEAN dropped back into the dressing room. He had started on a merry, merry, merry forgoes his gloves, and Mr. Shean without his full sartorial equipment would be a failure. He is left, upon his second start for continental company and a lot of coffee, he remarked playfully, Mr. Gallagher, we make them laugh. Gallagher stabbed him with a glance. "You're wrong, Mr. Shean, we make them pay!"

PATSY'S GOAT SHOWS DEEP FEELING

Patsy Ruth Miller's goat got her "goat," coincident with the filming of the "Hunchback of Notre Dame" at Universal City. Throughout the scenes Miss Miller, as Esmeralda, is accompanied by the goat. The publicity department wanted some especially good photos of Esmeralda and the animal. She was aggressive and it was assumed the goat would also be.

When the time came the photographer arrived and posed Miss Miller and then started in on the goat. Now it seems that the goat had been used to carrots as a delicacy and it insisted on mistaking the yellow towels that hung from the actress's costume for the succulent vegetable. When the towels failed to yield the proper flavor, the goat became peevish and evinced his ill-humor by butting.

After many unpropitious efforts to induce the goat to abandon his unpropitious tactics, a hurry call was sent for surgeons. Upon their arrival the goat was persuaded to spin between pillars.

Miss Miller is a St. Louis girl who has had a quick rise in pictures. She went to Hollywood on a vacation and was picked as a type by a director. Following her first hit she played extras for many weary months, then small parts until thoroughly trained in her art.

Austrian Army Officer Is Screen Emperor

It was O. Henry who called life a whirlwind of fate on which strange freaks of fortune flash in startling rotation. The seeming truth of this theory was borne out in an interesting manner at Universal City colleges with the filming of "Merry in London." In photographs at the Truck Theatre, When Rupert Julian, who directed the production, sought an actor to portray the character of an late Emperor, Francis-Joseph, it was a happy whim of fortune that led him across Colonel Anton Vavorka, formerly of the Austrian army. Colonel Vavorka's resemblance to the late Emperor is so faithful as to be almost startling. But it was a still stronger freak of fortune that the former Austrian officer, who stood high in court military circles, and was close to the emperor himself, should now be being the character of the man he once bowed to as a ruler.

Dancing Girl A Graduate of the Music Court

When Adelaide Hall, one of the dancing girls of "Runnin' Wild," the all-colored musical show which will open an engagement at the Selwyn on Monday was forced to give up her fondness and musical studies and her home in Baltimore, Md., in order to help support herself and her blind mother, the hopes of results in the show business were not high. Now she has exceeded even the highest ambition which her youthful life could picture. Not only has she won recognition as a dancer, but as a clever singer as well, and is now connected to be one of the best "blue" singers on the professional stage. The start came in an unromantic way. Miss Hall was given position on a music court at Washington, D. C., where she played and sang popular music.

LOCAL TALENT GIVES COLOR TO FILM

In "The Covered Wagon," the picture of the Oregon Trail, at the Majestic Theatre, there is a brief scene in which an old woman weeps because it is thought necessary to leave behind the walnut dresser in which she is carrying her rose clippings and flower seeds to make the new home in Oregon. This character is remarkably well portrayed by one of the old settlers living in the neighborhood where the picture was taken in Utah.

James Cruise, director of the picture, tells an interesting story about this woman to whom he paid $181 for her work. "Just before we left Camp Cruise this woman came to me, and said: 'Mr. Cruise, I want you to realize what you have done for me. I hadn't a dollar when your company arrived here and my farm was to be sold for taxes. The notices were already posted. The money I have earned has cleared all my indebtedness and the farm is mine again.'"

"This slight this woman was in was the plight of many of the farmers there in Utah. There had been two bad years, with poor crops, and scores of them were unable to pay their taxes. These taxes, as a rule were small, but any amount of money is large when you haven't a dollar and that was the fate of many of these people. I used a large number of these people in the picture, practically all of them being descendants of the pioneers whose heroism we were trying to depict in 'The Covered Wagon.'"

NEW INVASION BY RUSSIAN ARTISTS

In gratitude for the warm response of Boston to the Moscow Art Theatre last spring and in many of his previous projects in the theatre, Morris Galt has arranged to present here for the first time outside New York the most popular company of Russian singers, dancers and comedians, known in the playgoers of two continents and six capitals as Ballet's Chauve-Souris.

The Russian singer and dancer, known in the playgoers of two continents and six capitals as Ballet's Chauve-Souris, will begin Monday, October 1, at the Shubert Theatre and the engagement, which will be the only one in New England, will extend for a strictly limited period of three weeks, to be followed by a transcontinental tour which will last throughout the season.

The perennial appeal which Ballet and his band from the Moscow Art Theatre, have for theatregoers the world over, has been twice proved within the last six months. Concluding his long and phenomenal engagement of a year and five months at the Century Hall Theatre in New York in May, Ballet and his artists were permitted by Morris Galt to take a well-deserved holiday by returning to the Theatre Francaise, Paris, for a Summer season in the seven of their first triumph outside Russia, three years ago.

In compliance with Morris Galt's usual policy, Ballet's Chauve-Souris will be seen in Boston exactly as it has been in New York since February of a year ago when Ballet, finding itself famous from coast to coast, the full range of Ballet's amazingly varied repertoire will be brought to the Shubert Theatre, with its surprise tangle of comedy and fantasy, color and melody, and based on it all the dual personality of the founder, Nikita Balieff.

CHEKSKASKY RECITAL. Shura Cherkasky, the boy pianist, who has recently come from Russia and astonished all who heard him in a few recitals in Baltimore and Washington last spring, is to make a single appearance in Boston, when he will play in Symphony Hall on Sunday afternoon, September 30th.

Russian Artist

MR. DIASIANA

She is one of the talented members of Ballet's Chauve-Souris which, come to the Shubert Theatre Monday, October 1. One of her popular numbers is the Bee-Sw or Bourdoise de Mouson, a novelty that has become one of the favorite features of the entertainment.

New Ingenue Steps Into St. James Company

Followers of the Boston Museum Company will remember Rhoda Thoma, who has recently come from Russia and astonished all who heard him in a few recitals in Baltimore and Washington last spring, is to make a single appearance in Boston, when he will play in Symphony Hall on Sunday afternoon, September 30th.

COAL BAN LIFTED SEPTEMBER 30; ORDER WHAT YOU WANT NOW

NO LIMIT ON FUEL ORDERS AFTER LAST OF MONTH

The ban on anthracite coal imposed by the State Emergency Fuel Commission will expire on September 30.

That order limited the domestic supply to three tons. No home with that amount could buy more, and no home could purchase more than to make up that amount.

No public buildings, office buildings, apartment blocks, hotels, stores or factories could have any anthracite. They were limited to bituminous.

The retail cost remains 100 per cent higher than it was in 1914.

The fuel commissioner in his order lifting the embargo, says:

"This action is taken in view of the general supply situation, and in order that retail dealers may conduct their business in the most efficient manner and thus prevent unnecessary costs from being added to the already burdensome fuel bill of the household."

"Anthracite distribution by the exporters will probably be uneven for a few months and a spotted shortage of anthracite may occur in the commonwealth."

LET THEM STEW

"At present anthracite consumers have no recognized right, except to pay the price demanded by the industry, plus taxes levied by Pennsylvania. Our domestic fuel problem cannot be solved satisfactorily until either the rights of the anthracite consumers are acknowledged by the State of Pennsylvania and those engaged in the industry, or, until we turn to other fuels and allow the anthracite interests to stew in their own stupidity and greed."

The loss of production due to the suspension of mining from September 1st to 1921 will amount to about $500,000,000.

"By October 1, Massachusetts should be again receiving a regular supply of anthracite. The railroad will apparently be able to handle all the coal shipped."

The margin of safety on October 1, as determined by stocks on hand in dealers' yards, will be abnormal, by low for this season of the year. However, anthracite consumers in Massachusetts will have more coal in their cellars on October 1 than in any other year of which there is a record.

Stocks of domestic anthracite in dealers' yards totaled 312,250 net tons on September 1.

"The resumption of the mining of anthracite changes the anthracite problem confronting the people of Massachusetts. A supply of this fuel at an increased mine price is now assured."

"The price of domestic anthracite is the largest single item in the fuel section of the family budget. This fuel continues to remain at over 100 per cent above the 1914 price. If the people throughout the country with whom we compete industrially paid as much for heating their homes as we do, this item would not be of such tremendous importance."

"Comparison of our home heating costs, however, with other sections of the country having a similar climate shows that their annual household heating bill is less than one-half ours, because bituminous coal is generally used."

Burgesses Well Deserve Place in 'Who's News on North Shore'

MISS MARY L. POST
Miss Post, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Post of Beverly Farms, is one of the summer guests at the North Shore.

Mr. Burgess is a very famous naval designer. He has invented several types of air and sea craft, and can handle both with perfect skill. More than ten years ago he and a New York aviator named Herring designed and successfully tried out their "flying fish," the first New England biplane.

To record the list of things which the well-known Bostonian has created would require book form, and, anyway, this is not a column on science. However, there was the time, also more than a decade ago, when Mr. and Mrs. Burgess paid a round of social calls in their hydroplane, the trip being made along the North Shore, much to the amusement of the crowds in the towns below them.

Mr. Burgess, whose father was the late Burgess of yacht designing fame, began to invent things even before he obtained his shipyard from Harvard with the class of '91. During his junior year he invented a greatly improved rapid-fire gun.

PROBABLY one of the busiest households along the shore is that of W. Starling Burgess of Beverly Farms.

Mr. Burgess is a very famous naval designer. He has invented several types of air and sea craft, and can handle both with perfect skill. More than ten years ago he and a New York aviator named Herring designed and successfully tried out their "flying fish," the first New England biplane.

To record the list of things which the well-known Bostonian has created would require book form, and, anyway, this is not a column on science. Mr. Burgess, whose father was the late Burgess of yacht designing fame, began to invent things even before he obtained his shipyard from Harvard with the class of '91. During his junior year he invented a greatly improved rapid-fire gun.

As for Mrs. Burgess, she is entirely successful at holding up her side of the family's claim to fame. She is an artist of recognized merit. The exhibition of her etchings and landscapes have called forth the marked praise from notable critics.

Mrs. Burgess—she was once Miss Rosamond Tudor and formerly the wife of Alexander H. Higginson—has a lovely little studio hidden in the woods of the Farms on Leather Lane, off the Manchester road. During the summer she has held a number of exhibits there. The last one, held in August, gave visitors an opportunity of seeing the works of this clever artist's pupils.

Among the students and pupils of the Summer Colony who belong to Rosamond Tudor's classes are Madeline Freddy Prince, T. Jefferson Newbold, Harry Pratt McKean, as well as Marcia Davis, Mary L. Post and Dorothy B. Paine. These are only a few.

Despite her interest in her own work, Rosamond Tudor has always shown the keenest interest in her husband's inventions. She has accompanied him on many of his trips, both on land and in the air, and is known along the shore as a skilled sailor.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Burgess occupy a prominent place in our "Who's Who" of the North Shore—and why.

MRS. JOHN S. LAWRENCE of Topsfield and Mrs. Philip Stockton of Manchester gave a small dance the other evening at the Mounterrat Club for members of the younger set along the shore.

A Royal welcome is being prepared along the shore for Mr. and Mrs. Keith Merrill (Katherine Ayer), who are expected to arrive at "Avalon," the old Ayer estate in Freetown, for a late autumn stay. Mr. Merrill, who is in the diplomatic corps of this country, was at Madrid for some time, but of late has been in England. Last summer "Avalon" was occupied by Secretary of the Treasury Mellon and his son and daughter, Miss Alma Mellon. The latter have spent much of the summer abroad.

TODAY'S BUNCH OF WINNING LOCAL LAFS

Mrs. Dunn to neighbor: "Why don't you come and see me, Mrs. Finn?"

Mrs. Finn: "Sure, if I lived as near as you do to me, I'd be over every day in the week."

Wife—if I were to die would you wait for me in the other shore?

Husband—I guess so, dear, I've had to wait for you everywhere else.

MRS. GLADYS BAKER, 95 Preston court, Dorchester.

"What was the big idea of those aviators yelling 'Hurrah for Mars' when they landed?"

"Oh, they found a bootlegger waiting above the three-mile limit."

EVEN FIRE GONGS DON'T ROUSE GUSTS

Guests at the Essex Hotel sleep so well that early today when fire apparatus changed into Dorey square to extinguish an awning blaze on the hotel's second floor not a single blonde head nor kimonoed beauty leaped forth from a window. Maine King Kleagle Farnsworth Hits Bay State Trail

Worcester, Sept. 22.—R. Farnsworth, erstwhile barber and King Kleagle of the B. King Klan in Portland, Me., is coming to Massachusetts to tell how the State should be run, after playing a part in the recent election in Portland.

Every person who enters Mechanics Hall here next Thursday night will be given a card listing, among others, the question, "Are you a native, wise, gentle, Protestant American?"

COOLIDGE HOME LIFE PRAISED

Chicago, Sept. 22.—The family life of President Coolidge was held up as "refreshing in these days of blues Americanism," by William Matthews Holaday, director of the Christian Family Crusade, in an address today before the Brotherhood of St. Andrew.

He said fathers of America today are more responsible than the mothers for "the wave of flapperism" that continues throughout social life, and added that Sunday school teachers and public school teachers should go on strike against the perpetual jornde of twentieth century parents.

MENTAL AND PHYSICAL TEST FOR ALL ENTRANTS

The thorough mental and physical examination which 1,500 Boston babies will receive at the Boston health show, October 6 to 12, would cost at least $100 if it were possible to obtain it at the hands of the eminent psychologists and physicians who have volunteered for the better babies conference, said Dr. C. B. Clark, chairman of the director of the show, at his headquarters in City Hall.

"Every baby who is entered in the contest on the Boston American blanks will receive the most complete health examination that medical science has devised.

"If mental or physical defects are discovered the mother and her family physician will be notified. If the child scores high he will be entered for the bank account prize, GREAT OPPORTUNITY.

"In either event the opportunity presented to Boston mothers is a great one. At the rate the American coupons are arriving by mail and messenger the limit is likely to be reached by Monday morning or before."

To the spectators who watch the proceedings through the glass partitions of the big baby house at the health show perhaps the most interesting feature of the scoring of the babies will be the mental tests. All the youngsters from three months to 4 years old will be examined by Boston psychologists and their mental ability will be carefully computed according to a scientific modification of the Binet-Simon psychological tests.

TESTS SHOW BRIGHTNESS
Mother, if you want to know just how bright a normal youngster should appear to be you may safely rely on these tests.

your finger sometimes until you lift the child up right, will follow with the eye the movement of a flashlight, and will carry objects to his mouth.

If, while the experts are examining the baby, the child resists noticeably, is markedly timid or irritable the score will have to be reduced.

Enough ingredients to make twenty cases of "real" Johnny Walker Scotch whiskey, together with bottles, labels, stoppers and seals, all splendid imitations, were captured by agents from the office of A. D. Stroup, division chief of prohibition forces, when they seized an automobile truck near Summer and Arch streets.

Julian Arco, No. 44 Avon street, Revere, driver of the truck; Henry E. Harvey, No. 99 Southern avenue, Dorchester and Joseph Leonard, No. 23 Oak street, Cambridge, were arrested on charges of transporting liquor and were held in $500 bail each by United States Commissioner William A. Hayes Jr.

The load on the truck included eight cases of whiskey, fifteen gallons of alcohol and two saloons of gin.

STATE HAS NEW ROBB WITNESS

Reading Plans to Spring a Surprise on Defence in Suits Murder

By BEN FORD

The State dined today to have a big surprise up its sleeve in connection with the Tyngsboro suit case murder. Important evidence has been unearthed in the past twenty-four hours. A new witness has been found. He is a young man. His photographic statement was taken by Miss Anna Manning, stenographer in the office of District Attorney Arthur K. Reeling.

The witness said two other young men called at East Cambridge Court House after arguments had been heard on the means filed by counsel for Dr. William M. Robb, of the Race Way, alleged slayer of Mrs. Alice M. Welchendorf, and Dr. Dalva H. Swop, of Brockton, charged with being an accessory before and after the fact.

The three men were clothed with State Officers Sticks, Ferrari and O'Neil for a half hour. While they were being Mrs. Manning entered the room with her note book. The State detectives declined to make public the names or information of the young men or to give the slightest hint of the mission given by the new witnesses.

Welchendorf later appeared in a motor car with a Massachusetts license. In the car were a woman and a young man, the latter driving. The trio were in consultation with state detectives. In view of Dr. Robb having come to Boston to surrender from Philadelphia significance was attached to the presence of the automobile in Pennsylvania.

Judge McLeod took under advisement the plea in statement argued by counsel for Robb and Swop and ordered counsel to proceed with arguments on their other motions at 2 p. m. Monday.

WOMAN ROUTS 2 DARING BURGLARS

Mrs. Elizabeth Hughes awakened in her East Somerville home at No. 4 Glen street today to hear a loud rapping against the front porch. She lifted a window and leaned out. Two young men were scrambling up onto the roof of the porch. "What do you want?" asked Mrs. Hughes. They jumped to the ground and ran.

REV. CHAS. A. ULLRICH DIES FOLLOWING OPERATION

The Rev. Charles A. Ullrich, P. R., pastor of the Church of the Most Holy Redeemer, East Boston, died today in Carney Hospital, South Boston.

He was stricken with appendicitis last Wednesday night and operated on at the hospital Thursday morning.

Mr. Ullrich, who was about 57 years of age, was ordained at St.

James' Seminary, Brighton, and assigned as a curate to South Boston, where he labored 19 years.

Ten years ago Cardinal O'Connell assigned him to establish a parish in the Orient Heights section of East Boston. Mr. Ullrich was so successful in this that two months ago he was promoted to the pastorate of the Church of the Most Holy Redeemer. His brother, Rev. William Ullrich, is connected with the Church of the Assumption in East Boston.

POLICE HALT LYNN FUNERAL; DEATH OF WOMAN IS PROBED

Lynn police prevented the burial of the late Mrs. Nora Krochmal, No. 159 Hingham street, Lynn, by her relatives, on the ground that the dead woman was the victim of illegal surgery. The body was ordered to be taken to a tomb pending an investigation.

A burglar, believed to be a young man who has been seen hanging around the residential section of East Lynn, broke into a house and stole money amounting to $125. Police were sent today.

DODGED DRAFT IN MOTHER'S GARB 5 YEARS, DEATH SHOWS

Mansfield, Wis., Sept. 22 (U.S.A.)—When Mrs. Frank Schweigler, a lonely old widow, died on her birth truck farm here, it revealed the whereabouts of her son Frank, who has been sought as a desertion deserter for five years.

When neighbors, not having seen the woman for two days, went to her cottage to investigate they were met at the door by a young man whom they recognized as Frank Schweigler. He had not yet returned from the farm in five years.

RICH VICTIM REFUSES TO PROSECUTE

Rhode Island "Sports" Relieved as Gertrude Gilheeny Is Given Her Liberty

Providence, Sept. 22.—Mrs. Gertrude Elizabeth Gilheeny, who shot Ernest Smith, wealthy Providence coal dealer, August 29, walked out of the ninth district court at Harrisville, R. I., a free woman today.

She never went on trial.

A note made by an attorney for Smith that the case be dismissed, and it was.

Gilheeny, who knew so much about Providence high life that a trial might prove uncomfortable to a lot of moneyed folk, had been in Providence County Jail for two weeks, charged with shooting to kill.

Smith recently left a hospital, where he was recovering from the bullet wound, and is now in hiding.

"I charged I'd go free," said Gertrude with a knowing smile. Others expected Gertrude to go free also. It was common gossip in exclusive clubs here for the last two years that Gertrude Gilheeny would never prosecute the girl, who says she was once her "heavy" wench.

Today, previous to the brief court session, Attorney John J. Fitzgerald, counsel for the girl, Judge Harris, Attorney Lewis Waterman, Counsel for Smith, and Sergeant Joseph Smith of Smithfield, R. I., closed the shooting scandal, held a conference.

After Gertrude, child in a new gown, came to the court, she sat in a chair with picture hat, silk stockings and satin pumps to mind, was brought into court and pronounced a free lady.

Mr. Fitzgerald, counsel for the young husband, Mr. Roy Gilheeny, who is still a bride—and they departed for Harrisville in a flower.

Attorney Waterman, upon whose mind Gertrude was freed, refused to say where Smith is now hiding.

He is not at the palatial home owned by Providence's elite.

ABANDON HOPE FOR U. S. S. QUAKE VICTIM

New York, Sept. 22.—Search records no trace, here abandoned, read a cable received today from Japan by officials of the Young Women's Christian Association, in response to inquiries about Mrs. Edith R. Lacy, missing since the earthquake.

The message contradicted previous reports that Mrs. Lacy, daughter of Dr. Charles R. Lacy of Buffalo, N. Y., was saved. Mrs. Lacy went to Japan in August, 1921. She was serving in Yokohama as club work director.

3 Girls Confess They Were Offered Money to Swear Against Millionaire's Wife

Chicago, Sept. 22.—A time-yellow photograph of a girl seated at the wheel of an old-fashioned electric automobile is the main object of interest in the investigation by the State's Attorney's office of charges by Mrs. W. E. D. Stokes that her husband, wealthy New York hotel owner, has conspired to ruin her reputation in connection with his divorce action, which opens in New York October 1.

The picture, identified as that of a woman known as Helen Norwood or Helen Undergood, said to have been a friend of the notorious Everleigh Club here, twenty years ago, is the one Mrs. Stokes charged was used by agents of Stokes in an effort to identify the girl in the picture as the present Mrs. Stokes.

A mass of letters, attributed to Stokes, were examined today by the State's Attorney's office. All were addressed to Edward W. Allen, private detective, under the investigation to hurry his efforts to obtain evidence against Mrs. Stokes.

Specific criminal action charging subornation of perjury and conspiracy to defame the name of Mrs. Stokes was expected to follow confessions of three persons that they had been offered money to swear that Mrs. Stokes had been an inmate of a disorderly house before her marriage to Stokes.

The witnesses were Thomas Flynn, former sergeant of police in the once notorious Twenty-second street "Red Light" district, and two women, Bernice Hoyt and Julia Yancy.

HUNT "HIGHER UPS."
The police will bend every effort to find the "higher ups" behind the offer of money to defame Mrs. Stokes. As the result of the testimony of the witnesses a writ was issued attaching the books of a South Side detective agency.

"I was approached by a man I know to be a private detective," Flynn told Assistant State's Attorney Charles F. Whelan. "He asked me if I would sign an affidavit that I had looked Mrs. Stokes under the name of 'Helen Norwood' at a maid on the notorious Everleigh Club. He offered to make it worth while. I declined and reported the case to Mr. Erbe."

Bernice Hoyt and Julia Yancy told Mr. Whelan that they had been asked by Violet Phillips, the keeper of a disorderly house, if they would accept a generous check for making affidavits that they had been co-mingled with Mrs. Stokes at the Everleigh Club. Both women said they had refused to do so.

W. E. D. Stokes is quoted as saying: "I am not talking, neither am I writing. Any paper can print stories about me. My attorneys will make the only statements if any are to be made for me."

GAS SOLVING FUEL PROBLEM FOR BOSTON HOUSEWIVES

"CLEANEST FUEL" PROMISES BIG SAVING IN HEAT COST

Mounting coal prices and scarcity of this time honored fuel has caused business men and housewives alike to search about for some avenue of escape from their fuel problems. With the situation most acute at the present time, interest is being manifested in the house heating exhibit being shown by the Boston Consolidated Gas Company in the old Lloyd Store at No. 165 Tremont street, Boston.

Times when the problem of fuel for the family was a worry which the public gladly allowed the attendant to shoulder. That day is now past. The fuel problem has reached under the skin of every man who buys fuel or rents a heated apartment, office or factory.

SCARCITY OF COAL

There is no longer any doubt but that we have reached the point where conservation of solid fuel is essential. The most practical move along these lines appears to be that of heating with gaseous fuel rather than with solid fuel. With this in mind thousands of people are experimenting with gas for house heating. The desire to adopt this clean fuel is bound to bring about perfection of heating. It would not be surprising if gas soon became the chief fuel for homes in the cities at least.

Already many families in New England are using gas as an auxiliary fuel. Entirely it is much cheaper during the early and late months of the winter than to keep a coal fire going. Many homes last winter relied almost entirely on gas for heating purposes. It is not practicable to place a gas burner in a furnace designed to use solid fuel. There are, however, gas burners on the market which are entirely practicable, as auxiliary heaters.

CHIMNEY HEAT LOSSES

Neither is it practicable from an economy standpoint to keep a coal furnace at full blast on very cold days when more heat can be added in a more economical manner. With coal, there is necessarily a large loss of heat up the chimney due to the necessary draft. A large percentage of this loss is saved when gaseous fuel is used. Auxiliary or supplementary heat by means of gas is now almost essential if housewives desire to square their heating expense with other householding ideas of economy and comfort.

WAR BLAZED TRAIL

The government pointed out this method, during the war, in an effort to curb the national tendency to waste fuel, clutter up our transportation facilities, and divert more money than was necessary from the war effort. Many householders heeded this advice and thousands who profited as it is now saving on the right road with their auxiliary gas heating systems, keeping their coal pile intact for those days when they will need it most.

EVOLUTION OF GAS

It is not so long ago that gas was considered only practicable for lighting purposes. But people looking for a means to make cooking easier, experimented with one device after another to adapt its use for cooking. From this desire came the invention of the Bunsen burner which revolutionized cooking throughout the world until today it is the one thing perhaps more than any other that makes life in the city palatable to the country districts where gas is not available. See the house heating exhibit. You will find much to interest you.

SHEVILN IS BLAMED FOR STEVILN'S DEFEAT

By JACK CONWAY.

George Ward, Elizabeth, N. Y., waterweight, was awarded the decision over Eddie Shevlin, New England waterweight champion, after a furious ten-round bout at the Suffolk A. A. show at the Boston Arena.

It was one of those close battles which cause a dispute as to which way the decision should have been made. Many of the fans figured Ward had the margin, as many more were of the opinion that Shevlin had the edge.

A draw verdict would have satisfied all, but as no draws are allowed in this State the judges and referee had a perfect right to hand the honors to Ward.

It was a sensational contest from start to finish. At the end of the sixth round it looked as though Shevlin would win. Ward, however, was a more experienced fighter and he was able to hold his own.

When putting together a new regenerative detector recently I discovered that I had failed to provide a grid leak. I was anxious to get together the receiver to operate that evening and did not wish to experiment with pencil lines.

Knowing that the crystal used in the ordinary crystal detector has some resistance, I hooked up the holder and catwhisker exactly as I would a grid leak. It brought in stations exceedingly well, and I have since used this on the various other grid leaks from time to time with a better result.

I do not think the crystal does as much there as serve as a resistance in such a case, but it makes a very good emergency grid leak. R. J. New Bedford.

Extension of Grand Trunk

Entering Rhode Island Will Be Consummation of a Most Bitter Political Fight

We are very glad to learn that the Grand Trunk contemplates the extension of its lines to Rhode Island. This will be the consummation of one of the most bitter fights ever staged in the arena of politics between the public interests on one side and Big Business—represented by the predatory bankers in Wall Street and State Street—on the other side.

When President Hayes was the chief executive officer of the Grand Trunk he projected this line to Providence and Boston. Vice President Fitzhugh was in charge of the New England Division of the Grand Trunk Railroad and of the projected construction work.

The New England railroads under the control of Wall Street united to prevent by legal obstructions the entry of a railroad which would give New England another outlet to the West and North and unite our hands bond tightly by the crooked legislation which permitted Wall Street, through the New Haven, to get a strangle hold on the New England railroads.

This newspaper played the leading role in the struggle to free New England from the railroad domination of New York and the Morgans and the Rockefellers. Those who struggled in the public interest finally prevailed, and legislation was passed by the Massachusetts Legislature and signed by the Governor which gave to the Grand Trunk the right to build across Massachusetts.

But the chief virtue of Big Business is that it will never give up the ship until the water gurgles over the tip of its tallest mast. Boston and routed in Massachusetts, they still had the spirit to fight on when the Titanic went down and carried with it President Hayes of the Grand Trunk—the moving spirit in the Grand Trunk's expansion into New England.

Instantly Morgan was on his feet and communicating with the London directors of the Grand Trunk who then controlled that railroad. He had influence enough, now that the genius and force of Hayes was gone, to reverse the policy of the Grand Trunk and to secure the appointment of a president who would withdraw the forces of the Grand Trunk from New England. Vice-President Fitzhugh resigned in disgust, because he had solemnly promised the people of New England that he would fight for the extension of the Grand Trunk, and he was not intending to blackmail the other railroads, as was intimated strongly during the fight.

Now the Canadian government has taken the Grand Trunk and is operating it as a government enterprise, and the obvious wisdom of extending into New England, getting its great feeder here and an open port during the winter, must command the Canadian government, or rather Sir Henry W. Thornton, who is the head of the Canadian government railroads, to pursue the project.

We wish the Grand Trunk all kinds of success, both because it is a Canadian public enterprise and because its success will promote the success of New England.

If, after all, the Canadian government officials decide to go to Rhode Island rather than to Boston, Boston entertains no jealousy, but wishes Rhode Island all the profit of whatever she has in her situation which leads the Canadians to project the Grand Trunk to Providence and not to Boston. Boston will reap the indirect benefit from it and perhaps will soon get a branch here, also.

Amos Pinchot for Public Ownership of Railroads

Amos Pinchot, brother of Governor Pinchot of Pennsylvania, is an even more vigorous reformer and student of tendencies in our American economic life than his brother Gifford.

Amos made an address the other day at the Toronto Public Ownership Conference on the American railways. He declared that an indefinite concentration of the private control and management of our railroads would destroy our democracy and democratic civilization.

He asserted that years of intense study of the relations of the railroads with the great concentrations of wealth in this country led him to say that it was the improper private management of our railroads which enabled the great monopolies to come into being and which have precipitated the threatening concentration of wealth.

He declared that the great banking interests had gained control of the four biggest industries—steel, coal, beef and oil—and that the banking control of the railroads was so great that there was practically no competition with these industries. Thus the railroads not only created them, but were preserving them against competitors.

Slowly but surely the American people are learning these facts, in spite of the most elaborate, expensive and brazen propaganda that was ever fed to a people by the railroad banker management.

Poverty and Disease

Crime's Mother and Father

Judge Lewis D. Gibbs declares that "75 per cent. of all crime is a by-product of poverty." Much crime can be traced to physical defects, bad tonsils, imperfect sight, etc.

Poverty is the mother of disease. Disease, weakness and poverty combined cause crime. The cost of giving proper care to children, especially in the slums, would be more than made up by the saving of taxes used to keep poorhouses, hospitals and prisons going. Some day those who pay the taxes will realize it, and then the work will be done. Now children are dear and scarce. Or those that have it think so.

Steel War Coming?

Not Unlikely

When steel prices began to fall in September, it was not long before there will be competition, which means price cutting. Judge Gary is wise and prefers general peace and prosperity to a fight. But his stockholders come first. He can sell steel at a profit for less than it costs the smaller companies to make it. And that's what he will do, undoubtedly, if it is necessary to get business.

FARICAL LAWS IN ENGLAND

LONDON, Sept. 22.—War regulations, now become farical, will largely vitiate the evening if it is illegal to sell strawberries and cream, but it is perfectly legal to sell strawberries and ice cream. It is unlawful to sell cigarettes or tobacco after 4 p. m., but a saloon keeper can legally sell either he serves a meal at the same time. A restaurant may lawfully serve a cooked sausage up to any time, but to hand over an uncooked sausage would be a breach of regulations.

Aged Woman Cannot Work

Please excuse me for troubling you, but seeing so many aged women, I thought I might try. I am an old lady afflicted with varicose veins so I can't work. My bed is falling apart. I have tied it up, and the mattress is so thin the spring hurts me. As I am so skinny, if any one has a shoe size 8E, or a Winter coat, I would be so thankful to get anything. I will pay for them—that is all I ask in return. MRS. B. D.

Clothes for Veteran

Editor Helping Hand: I have two pairs of shoes size 8E, and two suits of clothing. I think I will let the veteran whom appeal was in tonight's paper. I also have some things that would be of some use to him. I am glad to help one that helped us during the war. B. C.

Things for Mrs. M. R.

Editor Helping Hand: I have a few things for the Helping Hand if anyone cares to have them. They include two pairs of school shoes size 3E, boy's school suit, size 10, men's shoe size 8E. My mother will pay the postage. Am 20 years old. GILBERT. Thank you, Gilbert. You have been sent the address of Mrs. M. R., who will be grateful for these things.

Editor Boston American: Speaking of childhood's heroes, I had six of them and was faithful to each. They were Moses, Plato, Caesar, Goethe, Milton and Blackstone. Millions could not replace the value I gained from such a wonderful array of heroes. They are yet my inspiration. P. SCHIFFMAN.

I need a coat, and job of things, but especially a coat. MRS. D. R.

Offers Baby Clothes

Editor Helping Hand: I wish to thank you for your kindness in getting my husband a job. Mr. W. A. C. of Boston street, has given him a position as night watchman. We are grateful, but we are just as grateful as we can be. I have a lot of baby clothes in good condition that I would be very glad to give to some poor mother. MRS. S. M. P. Cheering Sick Girls

Editor Helping Hand: I have the address of a Winfield, as I have a little girl of nine with the same disease, and as she is asking some little girl to write to her, thought that it would cheer them both. I feel so bad for her that I would like to try to do something for her. I am not very rich, but I think I can help a little girl who has a little girl. I don't know what my little girl

SEVERAL GREATLY EXAGGERATED RUMORS

By Herbert Kaufman

MUCH ado about little. Like the report of Primo Rivero's death, the significance of Baldwin's conference with Poincare "has been greatly exaggerated."

Paris and London press sentiments indicate that far from reaching conclusive agreements on reparations, France and England are merely at the limit of concordance.

There's chance for many a slip between a basis for discussion and full co-operation. Downing Street simply re-adopts Bonar Law's "watchful waiting" policy alias "benevolent neutrality."

As suggested yesterday, the news was too sudden and good to be true. Burning Rome means nothing to Nerio Solinas. M. Poincare, palpably, doesn't read the Washburn-Crosby ad.

Stamp a Fire and Another Starts

Mussolini hasn't mingled in diplomatic circles long enough to acquire a cryptic tongue. You needn't say that young man's utterances. It's refreshing, in these days of devious statesmanship, to find a mail-head-bitter. We are again reminded that "Italy keeps her word."

Jugo-Slavia surrenders Fiume in return for guarantees of an adjacent Adriatic port, satisfactory changes in the Slovene boundary line, and favorable military and commercial treaties. One more Versailles bungle corrected.

Marital law is declared in Bulgaria as Communist uprisings in which one hundred persons are killed, sweep the North. Cables whisper that certain neighboring kingdoms are concerned in the disorders. Scratch a Balkan and find a trouble-maker.

The Champion Fish Story

If all the blood spilt in those regions had, like the oils rendered from trees and vegetation by prehistoric clayey caverns found its way into subterranean pockets, a battle-fish could be floating in the pools.

Dr. MacFarlane, professor of botany at the University of Pennsylvania, convinces one camp of scientists that petroleum is entirely of almy derivation.

For ten years' investigation, he advances the theory that earthquake and volcanic eruptions, during the carboniferous period, killed so many fish that their fats, filtering through shale and sandstorms, have provided the world with incalculable and exhaustible oil supplies.

The recent discovery of a fish well in Texas substantiates his belief; but not sufficiently so to exclude a far more plausible explanation.

Common sense would reader suppose the notion that petroleum is derived from the transparent, resinous, and oily of coniferous trees and various seed-bearing plants such as cotton, flax, beans, lentils, goobers, and even sugar cane.

GARRETT P. SERVISS ON CITIES' PSYCHOLOGY

By Garrett P. Serviss Famous Astronomer and Writer on Scientific Topics of Popular Interest

HOW wonderfully the impressions of the past are revived by the sight and touch of the places where they occurred! I spent a couple of days in the old city of Nantes, the metropolis of Brittany, where the terrible crime of the "noyade"—i. e., wholesale drowning—was committed in 1793, during the Reign of Terror that embraced the city.

Just what it was that suggested the manner of death to the Terrorists, the only history of the Terrorists in Paris, do not know, but with it is indelibly stamped in the memory of Nantes and the name of the beautiful river Loire. Nantes, in many unbroken channels, flow through and around the city on their way to the nearby seas.

A psychologist might try to trace an occult connection between the crime of the "noyade," and another dark chapter in the history of Nantes, which is associated with a past phase of American, viz., the slave trade, of which much of the commercial prosperity of Nantes was based on a scandalous source of riches," says a French writer.

After the outlawry of this trade, vessels carrying slaves, upon finding themselves too closely pursued by pursuing cruisers, used to throw their slaves overboard, in order to get rid of the proofs.

Serviss in his books pointed out the location of the houses of the slave merchants, then the slave in Nantes, since torn down of decadence and destroyed, and looking for them, as one looks for the scene of a tragedy. They together with the supreme atrocity of Carrier's "drowning" clouded the city for me, in spite of its many remarkable and noble artistic possessions, with a certain darkness not to be driven out.

I wondered that some novelist, or romancer, has not taken one of these old houses, and the rich family that possessed it, both degraded and products of the "black trade" (traite des noirs), and built upon them a story as fascinating in tragic details and as effective in conscience-shaking power as Harriet Beecher Stowe's "Uncle Tom's Cabin." It is a curious fact that on the book-stall in the Nantes railroad station I saw a new edition of a French translation of Mrs. Stowe's "Uncle Tom's Cabin."

HEROINES OF HISTORY RACHEL'S BRIEF LIFE

By Mark Suyessant ABOUT a hundred years ago, in the city of Rheims, France, was a troupe of Italian children, who went about the cafes singing and dancing. In this group of young artists were two little girls, just four years old, collected pennies from the amused spectators.

These two little girls were not Italian. They had been born in Switzerland. Their parents, two Arian peddlers and their wanderings had brought them to France.

Little Elizabeth Felix—for that was the name of the prettiest of the two—was a girl of unusual talent who so energetically took up the collection—soon wanted to sing herself. So she selected the "Marseillaise" for her part of the program and sang it with fervor and spirit that she soon attracted the attention of Chouvin, the famous singing teacher.

This kind man took the two children to his "Pavé" and taught them singing without remuneration. Rachel spent her last days in the south of France, where she had gone in search of health. She died when she was but thirty years old, but she had made a name for herself as a singer long before that time.

"Bring Back My Royal Tooth, Or—"

Why the Temperamental Japanese Princess May Discover in the "Fields of Wisdom," Hereafter, That She Was Buncoed by a "Happy Ending"

PARIS. THE Japanese, especially the nobility, are world-famous for their politeness. Even earthquakes (to which they are accustomed) rarely dislodge their calm, continual, cool courtesy. So, when a Princess from Tokio, holding an aching—though sacred—jaw, and shaking a disengaged—though blue-blooded—first, mutters: "Bring back my royal tooth, or my honorable ancestors will put the eternal curse of Kado Daishi upon you," why, obviously something fearful has occurred!

It was at H'opital St. Antoine, here, that these now-classic words were uttered. A charming, short-statured young lady of exquisite, almond-blossom colorings, was the speaker. The listeners, toward whom she extended her quivering, dainty fingers in accusation, were a group of eminent physicians, surgeons and dentists.

They paled as her first violent phrases, in laborious French, blended into rapid, perfect Japanese—equally violent. They squirmed when she pointed one slim, delicately-tapering hand at their black boards, wagging in alarm, and the other at the unsightly, black hole in the otherwise flawless row of her snow-white teeth.

But they didn't know what to do about it till—

That, however, chuckles Paris, is the "wallow" of the story, and, as such, must wait a while.

Just as there can be no drama, without "heart interest," so there can be no "heart interest" without personal sympathy. To pity the poor Princess, you must first sympathize with her. And you can scarcely sympathize with her unless you understand her personality, her "background" and the amazing tangle of events which led up to the peculiar episode of the missing tooth.

To begin with, her official title is the Princess Takamasa Kido. Her husband (naturally enough, you will say), is the Prince Takamasa Kido. But this similarity of names, according to prominent Japanese residents of Paris, doesn't indicate a similarity of natures, tastes, whims, or interests.

The Princess—at least when the disruption of her dentistry hasn't upset her—is the soul of demureness, gravity, reticence and adtentatiously, in dim grays and dusty browns. And she shuns the spotlight glare of publicity as the owl shuns the sun.

Far different, declare the gossips in Paris's Japanese quarter, is the Prince Takamasa Kido. The handsome and rather swagger son of Japan's greatest statesman, the Marquis Kido, the Prince is not averse to harmless frivolity, not exactly eager to hide from that little world of light banter and champagne froth and innocent "parties" that is the soul of Paris.

The Prince is a cosmopolite. Though his home is in Tokio, he has traveled extensively, and it is not on record that he dislikes jaunting about in quest of adventure—though his devotion to his prim, tiny wife is an unquestioned fact, and he has never been known to cast an amber eye at any other charmer, though charmers of many lands have cast eyes, blue, green, brown and black, at his own smartly uniformed self.

The Prince knows America well. He studied mining in the United States, and—again gossip whispers—when he got back to Tokio University, his friends and relatives were just the least bit staggered at the way in which he had become "modernized." This "modernization" included, it is said, an interest in fancy foreign dishes, a passion for motoring, and a certain gaiety of mind and expression uncommon in an Oriental.

New York, London, Budapest, Vienna—the Prince knows them all. But he prefers Paris, when, to relieve the brain-fag Induced by hard work on professional problems, he seeks a fitting holiday. Recreation with him is no joke, for he is connected with the Industrial Bureau of Japan, and no clerk works harder at his task than the Prince.

Hence his latest junket along the boulevards of the "City of Light." Hence the companionship of his wife, who, like a dutiful spouse, went along, though she dislikes Paris intensely. And hence the tragedy of the missing tooth.

The Prince's motor-car zoomed smoothly along the Rue Charles Baudelaire. The Prince smiled, inhaled, turned a corner neatly. The Princess sat motionless at his side. Everything was lovely when—

CRASH! The auto skidded on a wet patch of pavement, turned sharply against a lamp-post, and the royal motorists found themselves in the gutter.

They did not remain there long, however. The proverbial "willing hands" lifted the stunned and bruised Princess, looking rather pathetic amid her dirtied robes, from the prone attitude into which she had been cast. Other hands assisted the Prince to regain his feet—somewhat shakily, but still manfully.

A hurry call was sent out for all volonte and other restoratives. A white-clad intern clambered out neat and orderly stretcher-bearers bore the poor little Princess to a temporary rest-place inside the Prince tottered to a seat beside her; the gong clanged, the crowd scattered, and the vehicle made for H'opital St. Antoine.

Arriving there, the patients were accorded really royal treatment. Not only the local resident physicians, but several others, well-known in the Parisian medical world, assembled about the bed on which the Japanese lady had been deposited, for a consultation.

The result was happier than might have been expected. "We find, Honored Sir," announced one of the doctors to the anxious Prince, "that your wife is suffering from slight contusions. Her face is a bit bruised. Her nervous system has undergone a mild jar. Otherwise, she is quite all right, and you need have no fear that—"

Just then the Princess, aided by more restoratives, "came to." She blinked her pretty eyes. She smiled a faint, and appealing smile. But the smile faded into an expression of abrupt horror, as, with one trembling hand, she explored the side of her face. It was then that she made her great discovery, and then that she threw the whole hospital into consternation.

One of her teeth, a front tooth, at that, had disappeared during the smash-up. Now pital. They offered the irate Princess a real tooth—one of the doctors would even submit to have an incisor pulled for her, if she desired, and make her a present of it. A superb false one, "as good as the original," could be sent for. But Madame must be calm, Madame must not so herself excite.

Madame would not be calm. Madame wept. Madame threatened, implored, was desolated. And just then the gloriously unexpected happened. A grimy street urchin, who had been nosing around the Prince's wrecked auto, strolled in grinning, led by the hospital doorman. He held out one rolled band. He unclipped if it had been a mere Parisian tooth, the loss wouldn't have worried the former owner—much. She would have gone to a dentist and asked him to replace it with a cunning porcelain imitation. But—the missing tooth was a Japanese tooth; in fact a royal Japanese tooth.

That, as the Princess explained to the agonized physicians, was the point of the tragic situation. A tooth, as a part of the human system, is sacred. Its possessor could never hope to attain the Seventh Plane while alive, or lie in proper ceremonial state when dead, or go to the "Fields of Wisdom" after death if even so little of her as a tiny tooth should be missing.

the fingers. There, twinkling brightly in the sunshine, was a tooth, which he said he had found beside the lamp-post in the Rue Charles Baudelaire.

How the joyful physicians had the tooth replaced; how the Princess beamed and gave the gamin many, many francs and beamed again, and how the whole hospital staff gave a loud hurrah as the Japanese nobles left, it is not the purpose of this chronicle to relate.

There are those who say the tooth was a "plant"—who knows?

But it may be added that the Prince and Princess have left that dear Paris in the best of humors, and that—so Paris giggles—the Prince has sold his motor car and gone in for the harmless radio instead!
